Horsepower Reduced by Car Makers

DAVID J. WILKIE P. Automotive Writer

DETROIT (AF) - Several auto makers have reduced horsepower ratings in 1959 model cars: practically all the new models are lower: a few are longer and several are wider than last year's mod

These are highlights of an ex-haustive report on 1959 car engi-heering developments in the De-cember issue of the Society of Automotive Engineers Journal.

The report says the trend toward wider cars already has led to sig nificant changes in suspensions and brakes. It may also go a long way toward a solution to the prob-lem of improved underhood ventilation and engine accessibility. the study says.

The report says changes in frame construction had to be made to accommodate today's lower cars. It details engineering changes in virtually every American-made automobile.

Of car engines the study says many power plants have been tailored to bring peak performance within the normal driving range.

"Reduced compression ratios permit the use of lower priced, standard fuels. Refinements for 1959 include improved carburetion, reduced noise level, weight fieduction and greater economy.

Public Thinks Prices Will Again Rise

By SAM PAWSON AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) - Belief that prices will rise again seems firmly entrenched in the public mind to-

Economists can point out many reasons why prices needn't rise They can cite the excess of supplies and of production enpacity. They can quote statistics that seem to show that the cost of living has leveled off and isn't expected to go up again for the next few months.

But many consumers just den't believe them. Why?
Partly because the economists haven't been to correct about price trends in the past - prices didn't fall during the recession as expected by both the public and economic theorists.

Partly because many households know that statistics or no statis-tics, the bills seem to go on ncunting,

And partly because the trend in basic commodity prices is one thing, but the trend in labor costs is another - and this often more than offsets any price drop in rajv materials.

The evidence that expectation of higher prices is widespread de-spite the easing of inflation fears among the economists and the financial leaders comes today from tivo sources:

The Survey Rosearch Center of the University of Michigan says that in October twice as many consumers believed in coming prine rises as did in this spring. Finance company executives are predicting further rises in install ment credit now that the auto dealers are getting deliveries of new cars, The case against further inflation just now, however is a strong

one. As a whole, basic commodieies have shown either pilce stab-

The recovery in industrial activity didn't lead to any rush to stock up on ray materials as it often had in the past. Rather until just recently manufactured. recently manufacturers continued to pare their inventories.

The wage increases in the auto industry left their marks on car prices. And the string of strikes have kent new models scarce at the retail level. 🕨 A new rise in cont mine synge
